PICKPOCKETS ON INTERURBAN CAR

New Carlisle Man Claims to Have Been Victim.

Efforts of the police department to locate pickpockets, which have occupied their vocation on a Southern Michigan car bound for St. Joseph, Mich., Sunday night, have been fruitless, although several clues are in possession of the department which may result in arrests. George Ackerman, New Carlisle, this county, reported to the police department that someone had at his person robbed of $12 in money and $42 in checks. He gave a description of two suspects.

Ackerman claims two men crowded in beside him in the car at Mishawaka and then left the coach as it was leaving the city limits. A few minutes after Ackerman claims he missed his wallet which had been in a pocket of his coat. The two men he claims he noticed as suspicious looking were well dressed. One had an eye missing. This one Ackerman claims, was called "Rooie" by the other man.

ALLEGES PECULIAR ACTION MRS. GOOD

MAID ON STAND IN DAUGHTER'S WILL CONTEST.

Testifies Woman Polished Stove With Cornsch and Furniture With Paper in Closets.

Proceedings in the suit of Mrs. Mabel M. Treanor to set aside the codicil to the will of her mother, Mrs. Mary Good, on trial before Judge Vernon W. Van Fleet in the superior court, reached a contest between counsel and the testimony was quite featureless. Delia Hoitn Smith, a servant in Mrs. Good's home, who was called as a witness shortly after noon yesterday, was kept the stand for cross examination for the greater part of to-day's session. Miss Hoitn testified in direct examination that Mrs. Good had intended to leave her money, but to-day was forced to admit to the reason. The direct examination revealed that Mrs. Good had been troubled with an unusual type of insomnia, that she possessed queer ideas of cleanliness, that she was a "crank" on the subject of cleaning her house and that she had other peculiarities.

The witness related Mrs. Good had complained of being disturbed in her sleep by noises in the house, that she was in another part of the house and quite beyond hearing distance of her room. She seemed to think there was some conspiracy. Miss Hoitn testified that Mrs. Good had accused her of stil it in the house. Miss Hoitn related Mrs. Good and Mrs. Treanor had disagreed on the way the house should be kept, but said the former frequently went to the home of the latter and helped in the work. She polished the crimmings of a stove with a cornsch the said related, and used these paper to rub the parlor furniture.

Miss Hoitn on cross examination was questioned with reference to the habits of Charles M. Treanor, son-in-law of Mrs. Good, and as to the daily actions of others in the household.

Proceedings in the direct testimony was resumed in regard of the cross examination. Miss Hoitn talked freely in her direct testimony, and on cross examination retained her composure and self-control.

The examination of Miss Hoitn was commenced yesterday afternoon. She testified as to Mrs. Good's reported peculiarities and remained on the stand from the time court opened after lunch until adjournment for the day.

Miss Hoitn related Mrs. Good at times had scolded and criticised her in a peculiar manner. On one occasion, she appeared greatly disturbed because the girl had polished the stove and with a cornsch, obtained in the stables, herself polished the nickle crimmings. At other times, the witness said, Mrs. Good polished the parlor furniture with paper.

Mrs. Good at different times went into the backyard and alleys and searched the rubbish piles according to Miss Hoitn's statements. On one occasion she brought to the house an armful of old coffee cans, while at another time she came in with a bushel of old bottles. The maid said she had been told to wash and soak the labels off these, after which Mrs. Good put them in a closet.

The witness was questioned with reference to Mrs. Good's reported insomnia. She said she was often criticised for waking her mistress, although she took extra precaution to enter the room quietly and stand in the dark waiting. She related she had entered the house on one occasion carrying her shoes but Mrs. Good had the following morning claimed to have been disturbed by footsteps in the hall. She also told she had finally been given the silent treatment, which had been continued, she said. This was yesterday the witness observed as Mrs. Good occupied an apartment on the south side of the house, which is some distance from the servants' quarters.
