and other businesses in the downtown area. The present-day photos show many parking lots and vacant spaces.

A 1932 photo includes an Italianate home and a row of small businesses just north of the Michigan Street viaduct, where the Thurgood center lot now stands.

at the spot that is now part of Ignition Park.

Local residents are familiar with the row of small businesses along the Northshore Drive west of the Michigan Street Bridge in Leeper Park. In a 1910 image in the exhibit, a horse-drawn street sweeper is shown on the familiar-looking bridge. But there are few houses yet along that stretch of Northshore.

Another horse-drawn wagon is shown in front of visible in the background. 212 N. Colfax Ave., which still stands and now houses Traveline travel agency. The undated early photo says the building originally was the house of South Bend Mayor William C. George, but was remodeled in 1906 to become the offices of the Home Telephone Co. and later served as Elbel Brothers Music Store.

The exhibit allows visitors to get a glimpse of South Bend's past and perhaps plan for the future. Then and Now continues through Sept. 5.
