South Bend was defeated by Fort Wayne yesterday morning in the 17th inning of one of the most remarkable games in the history of baseball. After struggling desperately for two hours and fifty minutes the Greens finally yielded and Harry Ostdiek, Fort Wayne's great catcher crossed the plate with the lone run which gave the railroaders victory. In the afternoon South Bend, with Elmer Moffit in the box, turned the tables on the league leaders and ended the day's work with an even split, taking the game by a score of 2 to 8. Sunday's contest, at Fort Wayne, remarkable in many instances, was won by Fort Wayne by a score of 1 to 0.

Great as was yesterday's fine game no player or fan would like to see a repetition of the contest. It was too heart-rending, too great a strain on the nerves of even the strongest of men as was shown when the end was seen. When Ostdiek crossed the plate with the only tally of the morning, men and women sank back into their seats, seemingly in a dazed condition. While they tried to speak to escort and neighbor sobs choked back the words and it was not until the 12 tired players had dragged themselves into the dressing rooms and thrown themselves on the floor to seek a little rest that the 1,200 fans, slowly walked to the city.

Every man on these two great minor league teams was a hero yesterday, but to "Happy" Ferguson and Catcher Andrews belong the greatest share of the glory. They were the men who performed herculean duty, who time after time stemmed the tide and prevented the Railroaders from crossing the plate. Ferguson pitched wonderful ball and not until the tenth did he allow two hits to come in one inning. Until that time he had allowed just four singles. Such was also the record of Alberts who retired at the end of the tenth in favor of Carbiner who pitched the next eight innings. Alberts however passed three men to first and hit Cogswell, while "Fergie" allowed only one gift.

Andrews in the Glory.

Behind the bat Catcher Andrews supported Ferguson in magnificent shape and not only helped the great pitcher to make his record, but he also distinguished himself as one of the cleverest backstops playing the game to-day. Andrews most brilliant work was in the tenth inning when he showed his Napoleonic qualities of mind. At that stage of the game two lucky scratch hits placed Ostdiek and Hoar on second and first, Greenschaw and Ferguson failing to field the ball because of fails. Lindsay then sacrificed and the two base runners moved up a notch. With only one out, defeat for South Bend was almost certain. The fans were all on their feet but a deathlike silence reigned over the park. Dade Myers had called Dennis the heavy hitter into the game with instructions to hand Ostdiek in. His first attempt was partially successful, the ball falling short three feet in front of the plate. Andrews, quicker than a flash, jumped for the horsehide and although blocked by Ostdiek succeeded in getting it. Catcher, however, was over the plate, Ostdiek was forced to return to the ball left (Wagner's) hand. Because of the block, Umpire Dash sent Dennis back to the bat and Ostdiek to third.

Excitement Was Intense.

The excitement was now intense, but Andrews, cool and self-collected, was called to the bat, calmly stood on the plate placed the Greens and holding Dennis on second and Dennis hurled but the ball went foul and Andrews held it safe. Seldom then flew out to center and the greatest inning of the game was over. Out and on the players struggled desperately fighting for every advantage and giving the two pitchers the finest kind of backing. But there must be an end to all games and in the 17th inning Ostdiek hit down the left foul line for two bases and scored when Sharp hit to center. During the game Greenschaw accepted 13 chances, many of them hard and at stages of the contest when a single error would have resulted in defeat. Cogswell, Sharp, Andrews, Anderson as well as the three gardeners for Fort Wayne played perfect games and repeatedly won the plaudits of the fans. Spangler and Myers, the two brilliant first basemen also had their share of the glory the former accepting 24 chances and the latter 18. Cast, Grant and Eagan by accepting several seemingly impossible plays cut off Fort Wayne chances to score. The score of the game was as follows:

Crowd Was Record Breaker.

Amazed by the reports of the morning game which was not finished until 1:18 o'clock, business men, merchants, clerks, factory employees, women and girls, in fact people from every walk of life dropped their work and made their way to Springbrook park in the quickest possible way and long before 2 o'clock every seat in the grandstand and on the bleachers was made to do double duty. At 2:30 o'clock over 2,000 persons were crowded in the grandstand when the game opened at 2:35 o'clock. Just 4,243 tickets had been sold at the office. The crowd was the largest of the season not only in South Bend but in the Central League towns. The moment it approach to it was the crowd at Shinder's game at Fort Wayne when 4,201 people paid to see the contest.

Moffit and Klaus took to the slab in the afternoon and until the seventh inning appearances were that another extra inning contest was being started. For interest and excitement the game was equal to the morning contest. Both twirlers were in fine form and up to the seventh each team had just three hits. Then something broke loose. Coffey hit a terrific liner down to O'Connell, the latter making a great stop but failing to catch the South Bender who meanwhile walked and Sager advanced them to third and second with a beautiful bunt. Cogswell, waiting at the bat, saw his opportunity for fame and with a mighty swat he landed on the ball driving it to deep right and thus sending Coffey and Anderson over the plate. With one accord, every man, woman and child rose to their feet and with hats, coats, canes and umbrellas waving in the air they three times three for "Cogs" and the whole team. Cogswell drove in the third run in the ninth, sending the ball to right after Coffey had hit to left and Anderson had sacrificed him to third. The score was as follows:

Sunday's Game Was Exciting.

Like the games of Monday, that of Sunday was a desperate struggle and the vast throng of fans who crowded the Fort Wayne park yesterday and Monday in enthusiasm and crowded the embankment which surrounds the baseball diamond of the railroad city will remember the day as the greatest in the history of Fort Wayne. Curtis and Bean, were pitted against each other and their battle was a memorable one. Both pitched great ball, although both had bad innings. Curtis pitched the best first five innings that has been seen in Fort Wayne this season, but one ball being hit outside the diamond. He was apparently invincible and at that stage it seemed that South Bend was in danger of being shut out. Luck reversed, however, and the Greens broke making four runs, had the Railroaders been their foes for fear they would tie the score or do even worse by taking the game.

The scoring of the Greens was done in the seventh and eighth innings, although Only Bell Bean also on base in the ninth, when the situation was precarious. In that inning, with three runs needed to tie, Coffey, the first man up, singled and stole second. Anderson struck out and Sager was out from O'Connel to Myers. Umpire Dash walked both Cogswell and Greenschaw and intense excitement prevailed but Spangler ended the suspense by going out on a fly to Belden whose catch was a great one, he and Myers both running for the ball.

The score was as follows:
