TO ADOPT SCHEDULE

BASEBALL SESSION BEING HELD AT MARION.

CENTRAL LEAGUE MEETING

Magnates Will Consider Work of Many Men and Will Transact Important Business—Home Teams Must Pay Guarantee.

The magnates of the Central league are holding a meeting to-day at Marion, Ind. The object of the session is to adopt a schedule for the season and to consider an important matter which may surprise many of the baseball fans on the circuit. About 140 schedules will be considered at the meeting. The man whose schedule is adopted will be paid $50 for his work.

The magnates at the meeting are as follows:

O. W. Bement Jr., Evansville.
Dr. F. R. Carson, South Bend.
W. H. Landers, Dayton.
I. Maquire, Ft. Wayne.
McVey Lindsey, Anderson.
Charles Haldorman, Marion.
W. W. Irwin, Wheeling.
L. D. Smith, Terre Haute.

Each club is to post a $100 forfeit to-day as a guarantee that the season will be finished. Under the rules adopted for the Central league visiting clubs are to be paid a guarantee of $40 a game. This is considered a wise policy in view of the fact it will have a strong tendency to make the local managements use their best efforts to get out big crowds. Mr. Smith, who declared to have a $20 guarantee while Terre Haute was a member of the Three I league, but the other magnates would not support his contention.

RIVALRY IS KEEN.

Terre Haute and Evansville Expect Good Season.

Special to The South Bend Tribune.

Evansville, Ind., March 25.—While local fans are watching the progress of affairs in all the cities of the league, they naturally take more than ordinary interest in the make-up of the Terre Haute team, for the reason that a great rivalry exists between that city and Evansville, and the people of each place are anxious that their particular team should lead the other.

For two seasons in the Three I league Terre Haute has had the best of the argument with Evansville, and it was grinding on the pride of the Hoosiers down here in the "Pocket." When these two clubs meet in championship games there are lively times, and it is not always with the players, either. Open warfare at times is almost declared between the fans of the two cities. But when the baseball season is over grievances are buried and the slate is wiped off ready for the new time.

This season, it is said, that Terre Haute will be strong on paper, and the local fans the Evansville look upon as the ball field. Last Sunday was a pretty day and the idea met favor. Capt. Tom News, Mike Jacobs, Quinn, Kahn, Parkins, Carbiner, Black, Kent and Percival—spent the afternoon at the ball park and worked in the presence of an audience that numbered nearly 1,000 people. It was a great day for the fans. There is a general belief that the local team will prove strong. At Beach, however, the local team signed a contract with battery men who shoot the .200 mark. The local management is being urged to dispose of the services of several of the men who are wanted by major league clubs. None will be turned loose until all have been given a fair trial.

Work on the local ball park is about completed and knowing ones say that it will be one of the finest ball grounds in the circuit. The park will be reached by the street car line and a new traction railroad now building into the city. Evansville expects to have a better city team in Evansville than ever before. The management looks forward to an unusually successful season this year.

NETTER WORTHINGTON.

TOLEDO TEAM REACHES CITY.

Baseball Players Practice With Notre Dame Men.

The Toledo baseball players arrived in South Bend to-day and this afternoon are at Notre Dame in practice with the Varsity nine.

The bad weather for the past few days has practically suspended the work of Coach Lynch's squad so he is loath to return to the gymnasium after the outside work and a majority of the men did not take any practice yesterday. Some of them, however, did take a little exercise indoors and the men just finished their practice.

"The bad weather has interfered with Coach Lynch's plans in putting the Varsity candidates through some cast games for the past few days and he is uncertain just what plan he will follow in cutting down the number of players before the games open on the 15th. For some time he has been planning to drop about ten or twelve players from the squad and after putting the remaining ones through the Toledo series as a try out to pick the men that will be the representative team. Under the circumstances however, he is now considering the advisability of selecting the Varsity even before the series open. In doing this he would give the players more practice and five or six of the most likely candidates besides could be used and their merits tried. As matters now stand the make up of the team is about settled but the coach refuses to talk till the cut is actually made.

Studebakers vs. Brunswicks.

A bowling team composed of members of the Studebaker office force met its second defeat on the Brunswick alleys last night with the Brunswick bowlers as opponents. The successful team won three straight games.

TALKS ON ADVERTISING.

"There are so many important matters to be considered in outlining a plan for local publicity," said the advertising manager of a large dry goods store, "that it is difficult to be brief. Perhaps the most important to consider first is the cumulative effect of advertising. The logic is simple. Theodore Roosevelt once wrote a book. The newspapers commented on it, and then Theodore Roosevelt's name was lost to the public for a short time. Later the man was police commissioner of New York. Through various acts—strenuous acts—the newspapers continually repeated his name, and people began to know that there was a man in New York city acting as police commissioner who was named Theodore Roosevelt. The same man was elected governor of New York state and by the same process his name was known throughout the country. Later the word president was placed before his name, and now, through continued mention of his name in the newspapers, the whole world knows that Theodore Roosevelt is president of the United States. It is the day-to-day mention—the cumulative effect—that has made this man's name known over the universe. The man has made big good. Now, apply this reasoning to local conditions. Suppose a merchant in Indianapolis is good enough to advertise in Indianapolis when people will be apt to know who he is and what you sell."

The manager continued: "On this same subject, 'Cumulative advertising,' there is a sermon for every letter in the two words. It is the principle above all else which has made advertising profitable. Both the merchant and next to the newspaper, for, did not the merchant find the business and profit increase the largest share of it, the newspaper would be a luxury, probably a dollar a copy. But we are dodging. There is a class of men who advertise at certain seasons of the year just for a short time, because business is good and they can afford as they say, to spend money for publicity. This is done usually in the spring and fall and just previous to the holidays. Such men, however, are not the public at large as the rush of the season quiets down. Those men are as a rule, wooden-head heads. The advertising solicitor will ask one of them, 'Well, Mr. So-and-So, how did your two weeks' contract pay you?' And the answer generally is 'Oh, I received some persons—not more than enough to pay for the advertising, though. No further contract just now.' Perhaps the next day the same advertising solicitor generally knows a sign at each person—yes, ignorant of the cumulative effect which was just beginning as the merchant stopped the ad. The money spent wasn't wasted; it helped the dealer—just a little bit, and it helped the newspapers—helped it more than the merchant, for there are not always enough retail dealers who have learned the value of the cumulative effect to make the dealer consider good policy, and also to enable the publishers to spend some money in instructing merchants who do not yet appreciate its true worth."

He paused for an instant and seeing that his hearers were interested and anxious for further advice, continued: "See that the advertising thoroughly represents the store. If the store be classified and known to be better-class goods, let the ad. be in keeping with such a dignified publicity, and such a store will benefit by it."

"The words, 'greatest literary achievement,' have been written in what is known as the simple style—plain words, carefully chosen and used with force and precision—and whose criticism is it that has proven these to be masterpieces? Why, none other than the public at large. Yet, for years, that the best advertisements are those written in simple words. In natural to writing, and you are in speaking; the result will be far superior than though you strived for the witty, the profound, the superior.

"Speaking of well in native English, I have often noticed this to be quite a failing, even in the case of some experienced advertisers—men who ought to know better. When a man cracks a joke he thinks it is funny; where it is not funny, he thinks it is not. Perhaps he is not funny, but he is. It is. But he is generally the only one who appreciates it. Let others do a fair and flabby. Were Mark Twain, George Ade or some other wits advertising men, the ads written by them would probably be fairly funny. But the professional wit and the average writer of business announcements are two distinct personages, and their characteristics are rarely if ever, combined. Make the advertisements bright, interesting, attractive, but not funny. Do not think that the simple, straightforward publicity is going to start you on the road to fortunes, for it is not. But, the cumulative effect—if you be on the right principle—one talk after another, with experience on your part, which will give you the power to write business-bringing advertisements."

SUFFERED A HARD FALL.
